

DREAM THE END

TOM BURR'S WEB

New York, October 15th, 2012 – DREAM THE END is thrilled to announce it's latest collaboration with conceptual artist, Tom Burr in their October issue: "Live Online Exhibition Edition." The curated works can be viewed at www.dreamtheend.com and in person at Bortolami Gallery for the month of October.

For DREAM THE END's eleventh edition, Burr explores the connections one makes in life and how those relationships inspire and influence one's artistic identity. The "Exhibition Edition" is alive and ever growing with new images added every week throughout the month. It showcases work from artists across all mediums from American artist Dash Snow to Amanda Lear and New York School poet Frank O'hara—all of whom carry a distinct weight in Burr's artistic accomplishments.

"Artists look at other artists. We hear ourselves across time and on other sides of walls, working, not working, listening, painting, speaking, not speaking. We watch what we make and how we make it. We search for clues, for substance, for stimulation and connection. When we work out and through each other we tangle our language together and produce new sentences, distinct syntax." -Tom Burr.

Tom Burr is a New York based conceptual and minimalist artist whose work covers installation, photography, drawing and sculpture. His art investigates the social, psychological effects of public spaces and gender stigmas.

DREAM THE END is a unique online forum: part-blog, part-magazine, and part-gallery, which features art and inspiration of exceptional talents in the fields of music, writing, motion, and fine arts. The online platform draws attention to hidden gems in art using a democratic, fresh, and exciting approach. It creates a rich sensory experience for its users to discover and enjoy while streaming notable tracks and mix tapes uninterrupted.

Each month DREAM THE END dedicates its home page to a curated theme or Guest Editor featuring exclusive collaborations found only on DREAM THE END.
